

Elizabeth A. Fowler
Acting Director
Indian Health Service

Elizabeth A. Fowler, a member of the Comanche Nation with descendance from the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, is acting director of the Indian Health Service, an agency within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. The IHS is the principal federal health care advocate and provider of health care services for American Indians and Alaska Natives. As acting director, Ms. Fowler administers a nationwide health care delivery program that is responsible for providing preventive, curative, and community health care to approximately 2.6 million American Indians and Alaska Natives in hospitals, clinics, and other settings throughout the United States.

Ms. Fowler has served as the executive officer for the IHS Oklahoma City Area since February 2019, overseeing the administrative functions for the Area including human resources, finance, acquisitions, and property and supply, National Supply Service Center, business office, Purchased and Referred Care, health information management, and information technology programs.

She began her career with IHS in 1990 in the IHS Headquarters Division of Personnel Management. Ms. Fowler has also served in a variety of different roles at IHS Headquarters, including: deputy director for Management Operations, deputy director for Budget Formulation within the Division of Financial Management, and the acting director, Office of Finance & Accounting, charged with the development of the IHS budget documents from the preliminary phase through the congressional phase and ensuring tribal consultation in the process.

Ms. Fowler has received numerous awards from the IHS and HHS, including the HHS Secretary's Award for Distinguished Service, various IHS Director's Awards, and the Luana Reyes Leadership Award. She received her Bachelors of Science degree in mathematics from the University of Maryland.
